

In America, we've been losing more than an acre of farmland per minute.

Farmers want to be good stewards of the land, but most are not getting the help they need to adopt environmentally sound practices.

We need 13 million more acres growing fruit and vegetables for everyone to meet the minimum recommended dietary guidelines.

American Farmland Trust

Thanks to AFT, more of our important working lands are being protected and more families are able to stay in farming!

—SANDY & ROSSIE FISHER,
Brookview Farm, Manakin-Sabot, Virginia

The mission of American Farmland Trust is to help farmers and ranchers protect their land, produce a healthier environment and build successful communities.

Now, almost anywhere you go, you find awareness of the local food economy and a celebration of it. It's very exciting for organizations like American Farmland Trust that have been doing this work for so many years.

—BARBARA KINGSOLVER, best-selling author and American Farmland Trust supporter

This is the first time in my memory that people interested in agricultural policy reform have had a significant seat at the table, and that is almost entirely due to American Farmland Trust's hard work.

—CLAYTON YUETTER, former U.S. Secretary for Agriculture

We rely on American Farmland Trust to lead the charge for farmland protection at the state capitol, in Washington and on the ground here in our local communities.

—HENRY TALMAGE, Executive Director of the Connecticut Farmland Trust

We appreciate the team building work of American Farmland Trust in helping agriculture address two of America's most pressing environmental challenges: clean water and climate change.

—A.G. KAWAMURA, Secretary, California Department of Food and Agriculture
